However, this episode is another solid one as we explore The Naughty Butcher, from a band called The Spotlights. This particular episode features Mike- two songs from The Spotlights. And: we like the Olympics, so we attempt to pick the best athlete of the summer so far. Not surprisingly, it's a cheat: I watch old records from Europe's best swimmer. We all like tradition, so we determine the form and appeal of the US Olympic team by choosing the "best of the rest". a hydrochloride salt (designated as "salt 1"), containing four aryl substituents. This compound is reported to have significant improvement of selectivity compared to the related adenosine A1 receptor ligands

2'-deoxy-2'-iodoadenosine (KI 131, CAS 324618-60-7) and 2'-deoxy-2'-chloroadenosine (2'-Cl-NECA, CAS 84997-15-6). More recently, a new series of adenosine A1 receptor ligands have been disclosed in PCT International Publication Nos. I'm working with WP to build a very simple music player for a side project. I have something like this: jQuery(document).ready(function() { var position = jQuery('.player-bar').attr('data-time'); var audio = jQuery(''); var note

=''+ position; var voice = ''; jQuery('a.note').each(function() { jQuery(this).text(note + voice); }); jQuery('.player-wrap').append(audio); jQuery(audio).appendTo('body'); }); A C# E ... The data-time values are numbers that are already in the database. I think what's happening is I'm only getting the first note, but I've got the notes in the loop, so I think it should be working. When I copy-paste that into a new WP page, it works perfectly. When I put it in the template I'm using, I get no notes, and the loop isn't even working? I have no idea what could be going on here. I'm pretty new to WP, so I've only recently started playing with it. I'd love any help you can give. Thanks! A: Maybe you have missing quotes "" around data-time attribute? jQuery(document).ready(function() { var position = jQuery('.player-bar').attr('data-time'); var audio = jQuery('
