In addition to having it printed off, you must print off the following: A cover sheet with the heading "D741-1" A copy of your passport (in the same sequence as on the original licence) If you have any current model cars or motorcycles which you want to add, then you will need to fill out a separate form for each one. This must be enclosed in a separate envelope. Remember to write your address correctly in the appropriate boxes in the cover sheet. These will be used to update the DVLA database of your address. You must not complete this form unless you are actually applying for a new licence. If you are already holding a valid and valid (photocard) licence, you do not need to complete this form. It will update your current licence details and details of where to send your photocard licence renewal. If you are unsure of where to post your photocard licence renewal, then you should contact the DVLA. Summary To simplify the process of getting your licence transferred to a different address, and to make the paperwork simpler, the DVLA now issue the photocard licence with a dedicated cover sheet. The same form is used to apply for a new licence, and to apply for a transfer of licence to a new address. You can apply for both a new licence, and a transfer of licence at the same time. For the transfer of licence you just send your current licence with a new cover sheet, and the DVLA will send you back an A6 return envelope. If you have to pay postage charges, then you will receive a paper copy of the licence, with details of your new address. However, if you are transferring a licence which has been issued after the DVLA changed to the new system, then you must use a new cover sheet. The cover sheet has a heading "D741-2". This is the same as the heading on the A6 form you use for new licences, so you can combine the two, and send your cover sheet, and the new licence to the DVLA. You can get new photocard licences with the D741-2 form from your local DVLA office. You can get an old photocard licence with the D741-1 form from your local DVLA office, or you can ask the DVLA to send your old licence to you. 82157476af
